The general idea regarding this "sale" is that the market company, represented by Mr. Kilbourn, and afterward transformed, for the moree, into the Produce Exchange, or the syndicate of butchers, represented by Mr. Hoge, wanted the property when each found the other in the field. The forfeit was fixed at $100, and both went shead with the "spirited bidding" until the property was knecked down to Mr. Kilbourn at about $6,000. At the time it was well understood that that price would never be paid for it. All the movements subsequently made have been to gain time, or rather consume it. The plan has been so far successful that the butchers' organization has already gone to pieces. The National Shelf and File Company has filed a certificate of incorporation, in which the capital stock is fixed at $25,000, in five hundred shares of $50 each. The directors are Messrs. J. C. Loug, G. C. Garrison, L. M. Saunders, J. Greenville, and A. Witaker. The Commissioners have authorized the expenditure, under the direction of the super-intendent of repairs, of $500 for cleaning unpaved streets, and a like amount for unpaved alleys not included in the general contract for sweeping streets and alleys. William B. Moses, one of the bondsmen for Captain H. W. Howgate, has seized a quantity of foreign and domestic fancies, goods which a reporter can afford to look at but seldom purchase. On the left side of the room cigars, orackers, and other light articles monopolize the counters and shelves. Under the statirway is a tall lattice-work through which can be seen nox upon box of fine wines, and these are only samples, a spacious cel-lar containing the bulk of the goods of this class. In the rear portion of the room is a large refrigerator capable of holding between four and five hun dred kegs of sweet Illinois butter, which is one of the specialties of the firm. On the solid oak floor are huge piles of boxes, sacks, barrels, and other packages containing all manner of articles per-taining to the grocery business. In the front per-tion of the second story is the office of the bookkee per, which is connected with the floor below by speaking-tubes and a dumb-waiter. The remain-der of the floor is filled with miscellaneous goods and will be used for salesroom and for packing

. THE STAFF OF LIPE. The third story is devoted exclusively to flour, vith a capacity for 5,000 barrels, and the room is low well filled. On this floor is the boiler and engine which supplies power for the steam elevator and coffee-roasters. The fourth story is devoted to liquors of all kinds, and the array in this to liquors of all kinds, and the array in this branch, although at the top of the building, is a large store in itself. A skylight and well about the centre of the building supplies light and ventilation, and a furnace in the cellar will supply the heat. All goods will be received and delivered at the B street front, and by this means the retail department will silways be as neat and clean as a restor for. Takeney like all the array in this arlor floor. Taken all in all, the stock, fixtures ouilding, and location are the best that experience can suggest or money buy, and the firm will certainly be rewarded for their enterprise by the increased patronage of the people of the District. Odlum and Swimming. Professor Robert E. Odlum, who first es ablished a swimming school in this city, and who has taught hundreds of our people, young and old, to look out for themserves when in the water, has retired from the management of the awimming school on E street. It is stated that his former patrons intend giving him a complimentary excursion down the Potomac at an early day. He
